Socio-economic Impact

Environmental Stewardship

- Comprehensive environmental monitoring programs
- Strong record of regulatory compliance
- Community-based environmental monitoring (CBEMP)
 - Overseen by the AJES
 - Monitors the safety of traditionally harvested country foods
 - Collecting and testing representative samples from the Athabasca Basin
 - To provide confidence to Basin residents that the country foods remain safe to eat today and for future generations
- EARMP
 - monitor downstream effects
 - address concerns related to the safety of water traditional country foods
 - berries
 - fish
 - caribou/moose
 - selection of sampling locations and sample collection by community members
 - Managed by Canada North Environmental Services Ltd, 100% indigenous-owned company

Findings: independent monitoring programs continue to confirm that traditional foods are healthy and safe to eat

Engagement

- Cameco fulfills engagement commitments as outlined in its approved Public Information Program and Collaboration Agreements
- Engagement record shows timely and regular two-way communication that follows agreed upon processes, but also addresses concerns as they arise
